When the pursued plunged into the river, the pursued plunged into the river, the pursued plunged into the river, the pursuer paused on the brink. For a moment it seemed as if he were only waiting for his victim to appear at the surface before leaping in after him, and Stumpy and two or three others laid detaining hands on him. Almost immediately, however, it appeared that he was not minded to risk him self in the water, although his wrath was by no means assuaged, for after a few moments Gallagher, who could swim like a fish, reappeared some twenty yards from shore, and, keeping himself easily affoat, turned on his foe. Thereupon, Long Mike, making no effort to break away from the men who held him, opened his mouth and spoke:

"Is that so?" reappeared Callagher.

"Is that so?" reappeared Callagher.

"Is that so?" responded Gallagher, tockingly. He was not devoid of courge, though neither he nor any three nen up and down the river cared to ace Long Mike in a rough-and-tumble fight.

"It is," said Long Mike, "an' if ye'll me ashore I'll break ivery bone in "Yen".

"Ye'll not," said Gallagher.
"An' why?" demanded Long Mike.
"Because I'll not come ashore."
Preposterous as this proposition was.
Long Mike did not appear to recognize the fact that the other could hardly remain in the water indefinitely, and that all he had to do was to wait. He broke out again in language to which no polite person would willingly listen,
and concluded by saying: "I can lick
the life out o' yez."

"Ye can that," said Gallagher, unhesitatingly.

"An' I can out dhrink yez."
"Ye can that," said Gailagher again.
"An' I can out run yez."
"Yis."

In the first haif hour—for the game was a long offe—Long Mike's luck was by no means good, and, though the big man made no violent plunges, his pile of chips dwindled until Gallagher had all but a single stack of blues. The Style's the Thing That Counts

The smallest duty of clothes is perhaps to keep man warm—for half the year they keep him too warm, and any kind of clothes would fill the demand of necessity. But "the apparel oft proclaims the man," and, therefore, mankind seeks clothes that will tell a desirable story. The style, fit and finish of our suits, overcoats, etc., convey the impression every gentleman desires to make.

A THOUSAND MILES OF COMFORT

There's not a piece of track in all America that is better built, safer, or easier to ride over than the Burlington Route from Denver to Chi-

Route from Denver to Chicago.

A trip over it is the most notable experience in the transcontinental journey. For more than a thousand miles you are transported at flying speed. Noise and dust are noticeably absent. If it were not for the landscape that rushes past at 60 miles an hour you would hardly believe you were moving.

Through sleeping cars for Chicago leave Salt Lake at 3:15 p. m. daily. Through tourist cars Wednesdays and Fridays, Glad to give you more infor-mation.
